PRESIDENT 'S COLUMN

Bruce Kobara, President PVRG

We now have access to Pinto Lake with bass boats with live wells. The requirements for launching are: 1. All boats and trailers must pass the standard inspection (dry and clean). 2. All hull openings must be sealed with water tight plugs (Nelson Gong stocks them). 3. One gallon of white vinegar poured in the live well (make sure that all your plugs are in place). The pump should be heard to gurgle to insure the vinegar has reached the pump. 4. At least one additional gallon of vinegar for the bilge, enough to have the bulge pump gurgle. All vinegar will be provided by the boater. 5. PH testing paper will be used to check if any vinegar is leaking around the hull plugs. 6. The plugs and vinegar will stay in the boat while it is on the lake. The vinegar may be dumped in the RV septage receiving station at the park. I know these are complex rules but in order for the DFG and the City of Watsonville to change it's ordinance, this was the only way for we could convince them.

The city has installed a finer mesh screen on the Pinto Lake outlet in order to prevent the escape of planted trout into Corralitos creek. Hopefully the DFG will approve it and begin to plant trout again in the lake and we can put on our kid's fishing derby again next spring.

Glock Pistol

According to the manufacturer, the Glock pistol was the first "industrially manufactured handgun with high-tech polymer grips." The barrels and slides are coated with what Glock describes as a "high-tech surface refinement" that they call Tenifer. The benefits of this "carbonitriding" coating are not only corrosion resistance and reduced glare but also resistance to abrasion. Tenifer coating is highly rated on the Rockwell Cone hardness scale at 64 HRC.

Some Glock pistols are available with different color frames, but our G34 was basic black. The defining feature of the G34 was its long 5.3-inch barrel with polygonal rifling, covered by a slide that included a gaping hole just to the rear of the front sight. This relief measured approximately 1.75 inches long by 0.75 inches wide. Glock says that this serves to reduce stress on the frame. The dustcover beneath the slide was also longer, making room for a healthy sized accessory rail, which was molded into place. The schematic breakdown of the Glock pistol with magazine lists only 34 separate parts, 36 if you count the magazine insert at the base plate (part 32a), and the front sight blade, part number 16a.
